Hi, I just thought I would drop you guys a quick note to tell you how much I appreciate the quality that goes into Ringers Gloves.

Last Friday I was removing a main fuel pump from a large jet engine with a co-worker. I was holding a brass drift while wearing a pair of your Impact gloves. I told my trainee to give it his best shot with a hammer we affectionately call big green (a 5 pound Naugahyde sledge with steel sides). Needless to say, his best shot landed square on the tip of my left ring finger. Had I not been wearing your gloves, it would have been a guaranteed trip to the ER.

A week later and the finger is pretty much healed. THESE GLOVES ROCK. I used to buy MechanixWear from the Mac Tools guy at work, until he started to carry yours- which are a much better price! I can't begin to explain how your gloves saved my finger from sure disaster- it was a good impact, but it was an even better glove!

Mr. Dolenak,

Let me first say how disappointed I am when a products fails to live up to my expectations. I bought my first and only pair of Ringers in November 1997 at a racing trade show in Knoxville TN. Since that time your gloves have spent three summers crewing for a UMP open wheeled modified team, gone over the pit wall at Daytona, Road Atlanta, and VIR and jacked a Grand Am Cup car, spent three seasons as driving gloves chasing the TDKA (Tennessee Dirt Karting Association) championship in stock heavy, been my winter driving gloves, put two roofs on barns, four wheeler driving gloves, horse back riding gloves, and countless yard improvement projects.

Last September (2003) hurricane Isabelle hit my home in Richmond, VA. After sawing up the third downed tree in my yard a small hole began to appear in the index finger of my Ringers and since then has spread. What kind of quality do you build into your gloves that they can stand up to all that abuse? I wish everything that I buy would please me as half as much. They have managed to fit well after repeated washings and abuse, and I must now finally retire them 6 1/2 years after purchasing them. Your gloves have exceeded all of my expectations.

This is the first time I have ever written a letter with concerns of a product either good or bad. Thank you for making a great product, and keep up the good work. Please see the attached photo for what all of the abuse has done to them.
